Dear Diary,

Today has been rough and it still is. Right now I'm on a train to Devon. In case you didn't know I'll tell you everything that happened this morning.

I woke up and my mum was right there and she kissed me on the cheek. It was pitch black but I was used to that by now because we slept down in the cellar with bunk beds my dad made. My mum gave me an apple every morning but I didn't want it, the morning that I was dreading had finally come the day ~~was~~ leaving my mum because of the war. We left the house and headed off.

Miss Evans was calling out names to see who was here. When Miss Evans said 'say good-bye' I felt horrible. I didn't want to say good-bye but I did. My mum said she would write which I was happy about but I felt horrible. I will really miss my mum.

Which leaves me here on the train. I don't know what is going to happen. I'm scared.

Sophie's evacuee diary entry – showing not telling

Literacy - Friend or foe
David's Diary
Day 1 of the evacuations
Dear Diary,
Today is the day that I am evacuating.
Mother woke me as usual, shaking me on the shoulder. She gave an apple, this was going to be the last apple she ever gave me and so I didn't want to eat it. Mother said I needed to eat something before the train ride, so I started eating the apple trying not to show I was gagging. We set off and went to the train station. We waited for ages at the station for the train to come. Finally, after 3 hours, the train arrived but that meant that I had to say goodbye to Mother. I tried to give her a hug but my arms would not move so I just dropped my forehead into her chest. She wrapped her arms around me and I felt so sad, I tried to hold in my tears but felt one roll down my cheek. I hated every second of leaving Mother and getting on the train. Now I am sat here, scared and alone with so many questions going through my head.

Where was my mother now and where is she going to end up?
Will I meet a nice new family?
Will I remember my mother?
And I have lots more questions, too many to write here while I am so upset.
